

The Digital Product Prompt Pack

10 copy-paste AI prompts to find, build, and sell your first digital product. No experience needed. Just fill in the brackets and run.

10 prompts · works in ChatGPT or Claude

How to use this pack

Most people never start because they are staring at a blank page, hunting for the perfect idea or the perfect tool. This pack removes that. Each prompt does one specific job in the journey from idea to income.

- 01 Open ChatGPT or Claude. Either works. Both are free to start.
- 02 Copy a prompt and paste it in. Pick the one that matches where you are stuck.
- 03 Fill in the [brackets] with your own details. Your skills, your audience, your product.
- 04 Run it, then act on one thing today. The reps are the whole game.

Work them in order to go from nothing to a product with content that sells it. Or jump straight to the one you need right now.

Find your first product

WHAT IT DOES Turns what you already know into 10 ranked product ideas people would pay for.

USE IT WHEN You want to start but have no idea what to make.

COPY THIS PROMPT

You are a digital product strategist. I want to create a small digital product to sell. Here is what I know how to do: [list 3-5 skills or things people ask you for help with]. The people I want to help are [describe them]. Give me 10 specific digital product ideas I could realistically make in a weekend (a guide, template, checklist, mini-course, or done-for-you service). For each, tell me the exact problem it solves, who it is for in one sentence, and why they would pay for it. Rank them by how easy they are to make versus how badly people need them.

Tip: pick the one that scores easy to make and high need. Build the smallest version this week.

Know if it will sell

WHAT IT DOES Pressure-tests your idea and finds the holes before you waste a weekend.

USE IT WHEN You have an idea and want the honest truth, not encouragement.

COPY THIS PROMPT

You are a blunt product validator. My digital product idea is: [describe it in 2 sentences]. It is for [audience]. Do not be nice. Score it out of 10 on real demand, willingness to pay, how specific the audience is, and how easy it is to reach them without ads. For each, explain your score. Then give me the single biggest reason this would fail, and the one change that would most improve it.

Tip: a low score is a gift. It just saved you the month you were about to lose.

Outline the whole thing

WHAT IT DOES Builds the full structure of your guide, ebook, or mini-course so you just fill it in.

USE IT WHEN The blank page is stopping you from starting.

COPY THIS PROMPT

You are a digital product editor. I am creating a [guide, ebook, or mini-course] that helps [audience] to [outcome]. Give me a complete outline: a working title, 5-8 sections in a logical order, and for each section 3-5 bullet points of what it must cover. Keep it practical and skimmable. At the end, tell me which single section is the most valuable so I write that one first.

Tip: write the most valuable section first. Momentum beats order.

Write the sales page

WHAT IT DOES Writes your sales page on a proven structure, in plain, honest language.

USE IT WHEN The product is built and you need the words that sell it.

COPY THIS PROMPT

You are a direct-response copywriter. Write a sales page for my digital product. Product: [name and what it is]. It helps [audience] to [outcome]. The problem they have right now is [problem]. Use this structure: a headline that names the outcome, the problem, why the usual fixes fail, my product as the solution, what is inside, who it is for, and a clear call to action. Write in plain, honest language. No hype, no fake urgency.

Tip: read it out loud and cut anything that sounds like a robot.

Write 10 hooks

WHAT IT DOES Gives you 10 scroll-stopping first lines for any post or topic.

USE IT WHEN Your hook is flat and nobody is stopping to read.

COPY THIS PROMPT

You are a short-form content strategist. My post is about [topic]. My audience is [audience]. Give me 10 scroll-stopping first lines (hooks) for this post. Mix these angles: a belief they hold that is wrong, a mistake they are making, a surprising result, a bold promise, and a question they secretly ask. Keep each under 12 words. Nothing I cannot back up.

Tip: pick the one that makes you slightly uncomfortable. That is usually the one that travels.

30 days of content

WHAT IT DOES Turns one product into a month of content that leads back to it without being salesy.

USE IT WHEN You do not know what to post.

COPY THIS PROMPT

You are a content strategist. My digital product is [name and what it teaches or does]. My audience is [audience]. Give me 30 short-form content ideas that all lead back to this product without being salesy. Mix common questions, myths to bust, quick wins, mistakes people make, and small behind-the-scenes moments. For each, give me a one-line hook and the single point it should make.

Tip: post one a day. You now have a month and a reason to keep showing up.

Features into outcomes

WHAT IT DOES Rewrites every feature as the real reason someone reaches for their card.

USE IT WHEN Your copy lists what the product IS, not what it does for them.

COPY THIS PROMPT

You are a conversion copywriter. Here are the features of my digital product: [list them]. For each feature, rewrite it as the outcome or feeling the customer actually gets, in one short line. Then give me the single strongest benefit to lead with, and one sentence that captures the whole transformation the product delivers.

Tip: lead your page and your posts with the outcome, not the contents.

Write the launch emails

WHAT IT DOES Writes a simple, honest 3-email launch sequence for your product.

USE IT WHEN It is time to sell and you do not want to be pushy.

COPY THIS PROMPT

You are an email copywriter. Write a simple 3-email launch sequence for my digital product. Product: [name and what it does]. Audience: [audience]. Email 1: tell a short relatable story about the problem and introduce the product. Email 2: handle the main objection and show what is inside. Email 3: a short, honest last call. Keep them plain, warm, and human. No fake countdowns, no pressure.

Tip: three honest emails beat one pushy one every time.

Carve a free lead magnet

WHAT IT DOES Finds 5 free giveaways inside your product that each solve one problem completely.

USE IT WHEN You want to grow an email list (like this one).

COPY THIS PROMPT

You are a marketing strategist. My digital product is [name and what it covers]. My audience is [audience]. Suggest 5 free lead magnets I could carve out of it that each solve ONE small problem completely (a checklist, template, one-page guide, or short video). For each, give the title, what it includes, and how it naturally leads someone to want the full product.

Tip: give the how away. The generosity is the marketing.

Repurpose one post into a week

WHAT IT DOES

Breaks one long piece of content into 7 short posts, each able to stand alone.

USE IT WHEN

You are out of time, not out of ideas.

COPY THIS PROMPT

You are a content repurposing specialist. Here is a long piece of content I made: [paste it]. Break it into 7 short-form posts. For each, give me a hook, the single point it makes, and the format that fits it best (talking-head, carousel, or short caption). Keep every one able to stand on its own.

Tip: one good post is a week of content if you stop throwing it away.

THAT'S THE PACK
